Chapter 13: Healing 101

A lifelong interest in health and wellbeing leads me to explore a number of complementary and alternative healing practices. One of my health practitioner friends is likewise open to using other modalities. Sharing the same first name and born nine days apart, our numerology and astrological charts are similar. For many years, our paths have criss-crossed back and forth through work and neighbourhood proximity. We have also encountered a surprising number of parallel life events. Learning reiki just happens to be on her mind when I invite her to enrol in classes together. The teacher is also a psychic medium. During the introduction he informs the group that he doesn't believe in past lives. He cannot understand how a deceased person can communicate with him if their soul has reincarnated. This limited perspective is very common, and is an important reminder that those who are clairvoyant and psychic have not necessarily fully developed their own spiritual awareness.

Souls are multifaceted, multidimensional and eternal. All have the innate ability to coexist spiritually and physically. The teacher's mind has already rejected such rational and interesting possibilities...
